Seville

Amalgamating Mudejar designs, the 17th century Casa Palacio, Corral del Rey, situated in the heart of Seville a few minutes away from the Cathedral, in the old quarter of Barrio Alfalfa, has been meticulously restored into a private luxury hotel. Striking a fine balance between historic charm and modern design, the architectural features include original Roman marble columns, wrought-iron balcony railings, terracotta tiles, and wooden carved beams. A blend of old and modern, inspired by sensitivity and imagination, the fine art work is accentuated by a subtle Lutron controlled lighting scheme. The well-appointed bedrooms, situated around a central patio, are decorated with classic Nicole Fabre fabrics. The combination with pale olive green cabinets and stylish oak paneled floors provides an understated modern touch.

Corral del Rey
